SEAACA Rescues Pony

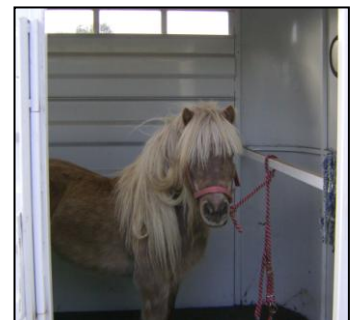

Shetland Pony Out for Stroll in Norwalk

Norwalk, Calif ...SEAACA Animal Control Officer Robby Gochicoa responded to a report of a loose horse in traffic today at about 7am. Gochicoa arrived moments later and spotted what he described as a tan, female, Shetland Pony at the corner of Studebaker Rd. and Hayford St. in Norwalk.

"She was a bit skittish when I approached, but warmed up and let me put the lead rope around her neck," said Gochicoa. "After that she was very gentle and cooperative." The call to SEAACA came from Norwalk Sheriff's deputies who were on-scene and keeping an eye on the wayward equine. "They did a great job keeping her out of traffic."

Gochicoa called for the horse trailer and the pony was transported to the SEAACA animal care center in Downey, where she was treated with some fresh hay and lots of friendly gawking from staff and volunteers. "We don't see many farm animals here at SEAACA, so she's sort of a star today," Gochicoa stated. "She may be used for pony rides...we're not sure. I do know that she is not bothered by the dogs here and she likes people."

SEAACA officials want to speak with the owner and ensure that the pony is provided with a safe and secure home environment upon release. Anyone with information this little pony is asked to call SEAACA at (562) 803-3301.
